Excerpt: . . . the cause of religion. --You will excuse me that I so often urge your advising with your brethren in the ministry upon these weighty matters, wherein the glory of God and the good of souls is so deeply concerned. I think I am not without the authority of scripture to justify me. It is almost the whole scope of the 12th chapter of the first epistle to the Corinthians, to shew the mutual de endance Christians have on one another by reason of t e various dispensation of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, for the edification of the body of Christ; so that it is evident there is no monopoly in this case. If I am mistaken in this matter, your candour, I doubt not, will excuse me. I am sensible, that if I have any true spiritual light, it is very dim and obscure. It is my daily prayer (wherein I doubt not but I have your concurrence with me) that the true light, which lighteth every man that comes into the world, would guide me in the ways of truth and righteousness. THE dissipation both of the business and what are called the pleasures of London, take up more time than real business, so that I find myself more in arrears in the correspondent with my friends, than I used to do when I had much more business. I am now in town in my way to Lincolnshire. Yesterda...
