Gregory to develop and establish this system in its entirety. To this work he bent all his energies during his three terms of office as superintendent of public instruction. These terms covered the years 1859 to 1864. But several years before this, Dr. Gregory had become an influential factor in the educational activities of our State. While he was still the head of a classical school in Detroit, he showed his deep interest in public education. In 1853 he was elected president of the State Teachers association, which had just been organized, and in 1856 became one of the founders of the Michigan Journal of Education, which was edited by him for five years and to which he contributed many notable articles, the titles of some of which I can only stop to mention, such as Primary Education, The Claims of...
